Commentary

In November, markets closed in the positive, with US indices outperforming other major markets, driven by Trump's re-election and his expansionary economic policies. The month was also marked by a sharp decline in volatility. In Europe, the month of November was less positive, driven by fears of potential tariffs and trade tensions following Trump's inauguration. In the bond market, the Treasury strengthened, supported by solid macroeconomic data and inflation expectations linked to Trump's future economic decisions. In Europe, by contrast, government bond rates weakened, driven by trade uncertainties with the US and disappointing macroeconomic data. Bund and BTP yields retraced, with the spread narrowing slightly. In France, the government crisis at the end of the month pushed the Oat-Bund differential to its highest levels in recent years. Oil ended the month stable at approximately $73 per barrel, while gold retraced from its record highs, finishing the month at about $2,650 per ounce.

During the period, KIS Bond maintained a conservative risk profile and a high level of liquidity. During November, the fund maintained a duration at its highest level of the year. Operations were focused on high-quality Investment Grade issues, favouring senior financials with short-term maturities and government bonds with matching maturities. Additionally, the exposure to High Yield senior financial issuances with maturities up to 5 years was slightly increased. Portfolio duration remains at the highest levels for 2024, standing at around 2.6 years.
